The new way to RELAX
ESSENTIALS FOR MODERN LIVING ROOMS

In 1963, Henry Moore created 'Six Reclining Figures with Buff Background', a lithograph of six lounging abstract bodies. Emblematic of his pioneering artistic legacy and evolving style (at this point in his career he was experimenting with materials and techniques), the work has, along with five others, been adapted into a textile by French textile house Garro Editions. This figurative print looks especially striking when upholstering a relaxed chair such as the 'Long Chair' (pictured) by Marcel Breuer for Isokon. Approx £290 per panel (garro-editions.com).

Introducing...

Otea Textiles

Otea (pronounced Oh-Tay-Ah) is a new Connecticut-based wallpaper and fabric brand founded by artist and designer Cara George (pictured). Its bold, painterly designs see her watercolour prints transformed into nostalgic patterned fabrics and wallcoverings that draw on influences from flora and fauna as well as rich, imaginary tales and folk art. Her debut collection, 'The Rendezvous', is formed of eight patterns available in various colourways and made from non-toxic, eco-certified inks. Fabric, from £610 for 4.6 metres; wallpaper, from £385 for 4.6 metres (oteatextiles.com).

Add instant glamour with designer Julie Hillman and Italian porcelain specialist Ginori 1735's opulent new table lamps. Part of 'Reborn' (the brand's venture that invites creatives to reinterpret its iconic ceramics to give the designs a second life), the three porcelain lights ('Athenian I' pictured) are hand-painted with African patterns and Greek motifs. Approx £2,200 (ginori1735.com).

If marbling was 2024's most imitable trend, French design studio Laclaux's joyous new offering elevates it to dizzying heights. Designed by Chloé Nègre, the 'Louisa' table has a top made by the Louis Del Boca atelier from stucco marble that sees swirling lines appear to rise and swell. Meanwhile, the structure and legs are made from cedar that's sandblasted and honey-stained to highlight the grain and texture of the wood. Price on application (theinvisiblecollection.com).
